TRUE STORIES ABOUT MEN WHO ARE IN THE PUBLIC BYE.

Posttion. Speaking of Engineer Price, reminds me of the unwritten blatery of the removal of "Cleopatra's Needle from the banks of the old harbor of Alexandria, sear the Ramlen Rallway station, writes Colonel J. Milliken in Frank Lealin's "Popular Monthly," Soulte" Davis, a ship carpenter of Nowank, Conn., and Engineer Price of Trenton, N. J., arrived in Alexandria about a month before the others of the party. When Commander Goring and Lieutenant Schroder arrived they met with active opposition from the residents of all nationalities, but eventually the American flag was holsted on obelisk, and steps were taken toward its change of base.

All the mathematical work, with the direct superintendence of the laborers, was in charge of Licutenant Schröder. The entire "needle" was covered with a casing of pine boards by Squire Davis and his gang of Arabs, while Engineer Price and his Maltese machinists placed the trunnions and supports and his distributions. did the immense amount of Ironwork

At last, when everything was clear and the obelisk rested on the supportslike an Immense cannon standing per-pendicularly on its carriage—Gorringe thought that he was ready to turn it down to a horizontal position, which was the first step toward lowering it to the ground; so he invited the principal dignitaries of the city and country to witness the operation. There was a Russian equadron in the harbor at the time, and the admiral and his officers, with a large 'lowering party' of Russian anilors, were on hand. In fact, it was a regular Alexandrian holiday, and the good people turned out en masse for the purpose of taking a farewell look at their chorished monument. The blocks and tackle were attached to the top, the word was given pulled with a will. As the obelisk awayed a great cheer went up, which a moment later turned into a derisive laughter. It only moved a few feet at the top, and all the hauling of the Russian navy could not budge it

Our Americans had made a serious blunder-the bottom of the obelisk was square and flat, as was the top of the forty ton pedestal, and in raising the morellth sufficient space had not been allowed for the turn. It was a humili-ating mement for our gallant commander when he was compelled to dis-miss his guests with the obelisk in a position that reminded one of the Lesning lower at Pisa. What fun there was that night in Alexandria at his ex-pense, for every patriotic Egyptian re-loiced at his failure. The following morning he had the Italian stonecutters chip off enough from the lower corner next the city to permit the turn. But what Gorringe at the time considered his great discomflure was, in really, the best bit of luck he could have hair; for, as surely as the turn had been made that first day, we should have received 'Cleopatra's Needle' in two or more

Gorringe and Schroder had calculated that they had placed the trunnions at the centre of gravity, and had consequently fastened only a three-inch rope to the bottom, intending to allow the monolith, evenly balanced, to be cently pulled down to the horizontal. On the first day they had not taken the precaution of making a resting place and tackle below; but as they had a large force of laborers on hand on the norning of the second day, and nothing else for them to do, they set them to build a crib of three inch planks to the required height. When the sailors started, that afternoon, to pull, the lower rope snapped like pack-thread, and down came the obelisk by the run, smashing the planks and scattering them as though they had been a pile of matches. Their elasticity alone saved ! from breaking. Our engineer had mis calculated the centre of gravity by about fifty tops. a scow, built under it on ways. Com-mander Gorringe then invited the offi cials to see the launch, and there was another Alexandrian laugh at his excense, as it did not take place at the time specified-the scow stuck on the ways. When, by a literal use of grease, time and jacks, the launch did take place, the guests had departed. It then appeared that another alight miscalculation had been made, as the nose of the scow was run into the bottom of

That folly son of Erin and of Momus, James Conner Roache, tells a story of John L. Sullivan, which shows that the Hig fellow is rapidly catching on to the intricacies of stage business, and is as zeolous as any other star for that eventh heaven of an actor's ambition, the centre of the stage, says the New York Son. "I was in Philadelphia," says Roache, "during Sullivan's last engagement, and one night after the performance I saw him standing to the office of the Continental Hotel lighting a cigar. I pretended not to recognize him, and asked a question of the crerk. He turned to me, and extending his hand, said: 'Hullo,' Still pretending not to recognize blue'l took his professed hand, but said: 'I am glad to meet you, sir, but I think you have made a mis-tuke. I don't think I have the honor of your acquaintance.' Sullivan looked unoyed for a moment, and then he aid: 'Here, no funny business. Your name's Rouche, and you know me. You and Bill Nolan were in a box at Sible's one night laughing and guying my seting." I do know you, John, I said. I'd

The two most prollife speechmakers in our language in there times are Chauncey Mitchell Depew and William Ewart Gladstone, says the New York Sun. Mr. Depew is 56 years old and Mr. Gladstone will be SI next month. Both of them are strong, full of vim and in the fullness of their mental powers. Gladstone is a parliamen-tarion and publiclet. Depew is a lawyer, ratironder and business man. Gladatone is a more learned scholar than Depew: who is a more nimble witted man than Gladstone. Gladstone has been a prominent figure for nearly as many years as Depew and lived. In the activity of Depew and Gladstone there is no sur cease. Gladstone is one of the most duminous authors of the age: Depew has not been what Carlyle spoke of bimself as being, "a maker of books," Both Depew and Gladstone are men loss gental than Depew. Both are owners of estates, but perhaps Depew is more affluent than Gladstone. Gladstone may again be Premier of England and Depew may yet be a candidate for President of the United States. Depew was a student at Yale; Gladstone at Ox-ford. Both of them are churchmen, Gladstone is said to be the master of seven tongues, but Depaw's linguistic genfus is boundless. Gladatone is a Homorie and classical erudite; so is Depew. Gladstone has been a Junior Lord of the Tressury, Member of the Privy Council, Secretary of the Colo-nies, Chancellor of the Exchequer and Prime Minister; Depaw has been an Assemblyman, Secretary of State in the State of New York, Minister to Japan and president of the Union League Club. Gladatone can enlighten his bearers on almost any subject; so can Depew. A statue of Gladstone was erected twenty years ago: the statue of Depew has not yet been raised.

A story is told by the New York Star about the theatrical firm of C. B. Jefferson, Klaw & Erlanger. When the "County Fair" Company was recently organized for the rend-a little, nameless Jersey town was selected in which "try it on" before opening in Chi-ago. Very little advertising was done or the show, and It was, in fact, billed imminent when each one of them de-clared his intention of ciding "Cold Molasses," the horse which should win. It was finally decided by lot that Erlanger should ride the winner, so he denned the white and blue polka dot. Klaw put on the white and red and Jefferson the orange and blue. "This is newspaper men will not sharpen your the only real 'cinch' game I ever struck wits on gravestones."

on a track," said Erlanger as the horses were started. "Yes, and I've got a lead pipe for the 'place," remarked Kiaw. Jefferson said nothing, but smiled an ominous smile, which was explained later on, when the orange and blue won the race contrary to the dramatist's intentions. Jefferson had quietly put up a job with the men handling the machine on which the horses run, so that his own horse would be pulled Eugene Field sends the following anecdotes from London to the Chicago Ness: The late Count Andrassy was as good a friend as Munkaezy, the painter, ever had. On one occasion several of the Viennese courtiers were disposed to rail at the Premier's interest in the artist, and one of their number asked: 'Don't you think you are making a mistake in paying so much attention to Munkaczy?" "My friends," said Andrassy, "can you tell me the name of the Italian who was Premier during Raphael's time?" "Indeed we cannot." was the answer. "Very true," said Audrassy, "and 300 years hence none will recall the Premier Andrassy, but Murkaczy's fame will live forerer."

Mr. Gladstone ran into town from Hawarden early the other morning. and feeling uncommonly hungry, he dropped in about 8 o'clock at the Baleigh Club for a quiet breakfast. He looked so red-cyed that nabody would have suspected that he was the grandest of grand old mon. The sagracious waiter mistook him for a "rounder"—one of the boys. "What have you got to car?" demanded the old gentleman. "I beg pardon, sir," answered the waiter, hanglittly, "but we don't serve suppers after 4 a. m."

"Colonel Ingersoll," said one of his friends to the New York Sun, "keeply realizes the fact that he can never have a career in politics, legislation or statesmanship, and can never hold any important office under the government for which he fought There is no party that would dare put up the speech making infidel for office or that would vote for him at any elecfon-and he knows it. Do you suppose he could be nominated or elected as Governor, or Congressman, or Alder-man. All the powers of society would be turned agalast him if he were put as he knows. There are other full-in office, but not one who has made his infidelity conspicuous. Ingersolt could not get 1,000 votes in New Norle,

RETURN OF THE "BRIP."

A Physician tityes Some Semenable and Senable Advice.

"From present follications there is every reason to suppose that we will have another done of the 'grip' this year," sald a well known expert in infeetlone diseases to a New York Starman. 'In reality the 'grip' warn't the 'grip' at all,' be continued. 'As any ite, not as we understood ft -a form a officence. It was simply an epidemior pneumonia, but the funny men the newspapers would not let us take the matter seriously, and as a resul hundreds of people were laughed into their graves. They thought it great fun to be tackled by the affliction which and formed the basis of so many jakes, ed while, under the racking pains that followed, the thing lost a great many of its humorous aspects, they rarely am-pected that they might die.

"Even to the last the community had

See how terrified everybody was was in a condition of anesthesia. Inst summer when there was but a hist won't give all these scientific words; if that there might be danger from yellow fever on account of the ships that had arrived from the infected districts. Yet no special terror was felt at any time during the 'grip' epidemic, when people were being carried to the cemeteries at a greater rate than could possibly have been the case had a half dozen yellow-fever epidemics been raging in this city. The funny men simply wrote catchy couplets about the 'achews' and the 'codes,' thanks to which very few persons took any precaution against con-tracting the dangerous lilness.

This time I hope it will be different if the epidemic reappears, and I trust that the newspapers will treat it as a serious thing against which all sanitary precautions should be taken just as in other epidemies. And that we will have a second visitation, as I said before, seems more than probable. If you will examine the health office records you will find that the death rate from pneumonia has been abnor mally out of propertion during the summer months. It did not assume the conditions of an epidemic, simply because the disease did not find favorable climatic conditions to propagate the

It may be, or course, that the indications are deceptive, but only the future can demonstrate this conclu sively. I certainly hope that they are, but if they are not, I pray that you

DR. FARRAR AND HIS BOOK. His Supplementary Gospel Was Sum-ciently Well Remunerated,

From the Landon Truth. There is something exceedingly ludicrous In an Archdescon asking mankind to pity him because he only made $2,000 by writing a "Life of Christ" forward at the critical moment. For the good of the story the man who played This was instructed when he came on in the following scene to say, "Well, Cold Molasses won, as the other fellow was set back for a foul."

and 24,000 by writing a "Life of St. Paul." The only authentic "Lives" of Christ purport to have been written by the Evangelists, and they, far from getting a large sum of money for their task, seem to have suffered serious perother fellow was set back for a roun.

This seemed to satisfy the audience, but not Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger, who still claim that they owe Jefferson one, which they propose to pay with inter-which they propose to pay with inter-then these excessive sums were paid for the former coronilations, it is rather due the former compilations, it is rather due to the lijustrations and to the subject matter than to the treatment. At most, they are a mere rehash of old facts, ex-cept where the Archdeason draws upon his imagination. That his "Life of Christ" conveyed this impression is shown by the well-known answer to the Cambridge Examiner: "We know little of the childhood of Christ; what knowledge we have we derive from Archdescon Farrar." It may, therefore, be said of these two books, "what is new is not true, and what is true is But what are the facts in connection with this dispute. Mesers, Cassell formed the opinion that a "Life of Christ" would prove a paying specula tion. They, therefore, entered into a bargain with Archileacon Farrar to compile it for the sum of £500. The book was largely advertised and proved a success, on which Messrs. Cassell made a present to the Archdeacon of an additional Cl. 400. But, complains the Archdencon, Messrs, Cassell made a great deal of money by the speculation. Prescribly they did. But what has this to do with the question? If I sold a well to the Archdeacon for £100, and be subsequently found coal under it, would be feel it his duty to give me a share in the coal? Assuredly not, and still less if he had bought twenty or thirty valueless fields of different persons on the chance of there being co. under them, and only found it makes my field. I regard the action of Messes Cassell in giving the Archdencon an additional CL 400 as exceedingly liberal and, instead of railing at them, he ought to show his gratitude by singing their

What do you think or an attempt to clean a man's heart. This is: what was attempted a short time story is here in France. This is a true story I am telling you—no invention. Two surgeons actually set to work to cut open a man's chest for the purpose of Joseph Davenne, an upholsterer, had been suffering for many years from fasts degeneration of the heart. The post man knew that he had not long to live, yet he was only 48 years of ago Moreover the doctors told him they thought they might possibly cure him. They persuaded him that at least he would be delay an invaluable service to science and that he was bound to die soon at any rate if nothing was done, whereas this might prove the means of curing thousands of sufferers besides 'And so," the story is gravely told in
